SHOW-OFF SEX

Playing to an audience can be the ultimate erotic thrill. Kathryn Fox finds out what happens when frisky meets risky.

Despite being fun for the participants, sexual exhibitionism can be highly offensive to others, and is, in public places, illegal. So, what is it that motivates some people to wave their genitalia about when they know others are looking?

Psychologists tend to have negative views of this phenomenon. Narcissism, attention-seeking, controlling behaviour and grandiosity have all been proposed as psychological symptoms of sexual exhibitionism. Often, exhibitionist pairs comprise an insecure woman coerced by a controlling partner who gives her positive feedback. But to some extent, we all modify our behaviours to please our partners, even though there are times when this can lead to trouble. Before you embark on showing off your libido, however, you need to analyse just how consensual your relationship is and make sure you are involved as a totally willing participant. If your motivation is to shock or offend, there may be some underlying psychological issue that you need to look at.

Presuming you are a well-adjusted, sexy show-off there are several ways to enjoy the theatre of an audience. Back in the 70s, a popular way of gaining attention was streaking. A young woman or man would run out naked (usually onto a sports field), waving, smiling and baring all for the crowd, cameras and police, who then gave hilarious chase.

It incurred a charge of indecency as a matter of course but rarely offended. Secret streakers would run from the back of a taxi into a car and speed off before anyone knew who they were. This was in the days before the street cameras, so the main punishable offence was not paying the cab fare.

Nowadays, the internet offers the opportunity for you to bare all to a sea of unknown faces in cyberspace via a webcam. This is still a legal unknown as no 'world police' have yet established any enforceable laws. Individual servers or portals may have their filters or rules but, for those determined to give a sexual display, it is mostly an open book. Interpol are mostly concerned with catching paedophiles and so ignore the rest of the sexual sites on the net. The participatory webcam experience is the most intimate considering the vast distances you and your audience may share, allowing the voyeur to give you instructions as to what is required next from your performance. Indeed, many an enterprising housewife has earned a few extra pennies by paid performance in this way, setting up a credit card account for customers. But that is prostitution, without a doubt, as it offers a sexual service for money and so will be subject to the varying laws governing prostitution. For those who give it away freely, however, this is quite a different matter.

Serious exhibitionism usually requires the audience to share the same physical space and, consequently, many fetish clubs allow sexual play in the midst of their partying clientele. It would be naïve to go to one of these clubs and not expect to see some kind of sexual activity. The hardcore swingers' clubs also allow both voyeurs and exhibitionists to do their thing without having to join in any other type of fun, so if you just want an appreciative audience, this could be for you. But by becoming less sensitive to normal inhibitions, you can more easily move on to riskier behaviour, so make sure you have agreed on your boundaries as two girls making out will obviously invite a great deal of attention from men.

There are a few 'women only' clubs which specialise in lesbian orgies, so if you want to writhe about with a slew of slutty sisters, this could be what you are looking for. If you do not feel ready for that, then just a foursome would give you a chance to see how you feel when performing in front of another couple. The most difficult problem in more intimate groups is finding people with whom you really click on a sexual and social level.

Dogging is a fairly recent phenomenon and has really attracted the attention of the media, particularly when D-list celebrities are caught doing it. It is illegal to make a deliberate exposure of your genitals in public but in the privacy of your car, with others looking through the window, the law must take into account the level of consent of the public who choose to view and whether or not this constitutes an affray. If, having sought out what could reasonably be described as a private place, you are accidentally discovered having sex by a member of the public, police are unlikely to prosecute. But if you start tweaking your girlfriend's nipples at the frozen chicken counter in Sainsbury's, you will most likely face arrest.

Whatever you decide, make sure you stay on the right side of the law. No matter how liberal-minded you may think society has become, this type of behaviour still carries a real stigma and can jeopardise your job, particularly if you work with children. Similarly, if you are a high-flyer and work with competitive men, you risk undermining your authority in the workplace if you are found to have an unusual sexual proclivity. Even though it seems unlikely that a woman who was into sexual display would become embarrassed if she were found out, it can lead to unwanted advances from work colleagues and possible sexual harassment.

Put very simply, a stripper performing on licensed premises is protected by law but genital display in front of those who have not invited the view is plain bad manners, illegal and is the equivalent of flashing. Few lesbians would condone male flashing, so bear that in mind when you feel the urge to merge with your other half in public.

Truth... or Dare

VIRGIN TERRITORY

No one is born an expert and rarely do our first encounters hit the spot - but you have to start somewhere on the slippery road to sexual expertise...

TRUTH...

Sick as a Parrot Candy R, 27.

"The truth is I was gagging for it at a school disco, aged 14. She was in the year above me and had a reputation as the school slag so I thought it would be a safe bet. I fed her with vodka from a half bottle I had hidden in a bag until she was pretty legless. When I took her outside to get some fresh air, I had every intention of sticking my hand up her skirt. She was giggly at first and let me snog her and squeeze her tits but then she threw up all over me. The funny thing was, even though it was gross, I wasn't put off her by the vomit but by her constantly saying 'Sorry Carole' about eighty times. My name is Candice."

Toilet Tricks Julie, 49.

"I always knew I found women attractive, but I married young and only divorced my husband last year, so I never really had chance to explore my bisexual side. I was a bit depressed for a while after the divorce so, one night, my daughter's friends decided to take me out to a bar with them to cheer me up. My daughter's very out-and-proud friend Stacey had been flirting with me all night, and the atmosphere between us was really charged. She led me into a toilet cubicle, pulled down my pants, and fingered me furiously. The location made me a bit nervous, so I didn't come at the time, but rest assured the memory of it still has me gushing buckets!"

Wash and Go Nicki, 33.

"My first lesbian experience was with a girl I'd been best friends with since the age of 10. It was the summer before we left school - it was a gloriously sunny day and we were both in high spirits. Her parents were away, so we started fooling around in their room. I took off her knickers and she showed me her quim. She let me finger her and then I got a shampoo bottle and put it inside her. She was very passive and really liked it. She let me soap her down in the shower as well. It was one of the most erotic moments of my life. I can remember how horny it made me feel and sometimes still think about her when I masturbate."

DARE...

First-time encounters happen to every new lover so here's some tips on how to make or break the ice for a steamy session:

Do:

Make sure you are absolutely clean. That includes your teeth, armpits, pussy and bum. Clean and cut your nails!

If it isn't going to be spontaneous and you have planned where, then get the setting as clean as possible. No soiled knickers or full ashtrays next to the bed. And change the sheets!

Ensure that any toys or lube are nearby so you don't have to break the mood while you search for them.

Relax your breathing and body before she arrives so you don't freak her out with your nervous twitch.

Don't:

Jump on her the minute you have privacy.

Insist she has another orgasm when she's already had three... just to prove your prowess.

Fall asleep until after she's satisfied, otherwise she may as well be with a man.

Try anything anal on a first encounter unless she initiates it or you ask her if it's OK. Some girls are so anti-anal it may kill the mood entirely.

Natural Instinct Nina, 31.

"It happened in my first term at uni with a lovely woman called Venda. Everything came so naturally. I had been masturbating, so I knew how to get an orgasm that way. I just followed my instincts and she went along with her feelings. We made love all afternoon and she gave me oral sex for the first time. I thought I would die from pleasure. Then I tried it on her. It was a great way to be initiated and made me feel very confident that I could make a woman come like that."

An advertisement for ID Moments lubricant. The top half features a photograph of two women in a sensual embrace, wearing black lace-trimmed dresses. A pink banner in the top right corner says "NEW". The middle section has the text "FOR YOUR SENSITIVE MOMENTS..." in large, bold, pink letters. Below this is a paragraph of text describing the product as a "supremely light and gentle hypoallergenic lubricant" with a "fresh green apples" scent. The bottom section shows two bottles of ID Moments lubricant: a clear bottle with a pink cap and a white bottle with a pink cap. The ID LUBRICANTS logo is visible in the bottom left. Contact information and the company's history are listed at the bottom.

Laced-Back Rubber Harness

Sh! combine practical finesse with rubber fetishism in this fabulous new harness. Chunky and robust, the harness is fully adjustable, with metal buckles and eyes giving it a definite hardcore quality – ideal for the horny dyke hell bent on administering a jolly good hammering. So what was it like to use? Rather pleasant, if you must know. . .

The harness was very comfortable to wear, and chaffing was kept to an impressive minimum. Throughout what turned out to be several, rather prolonged test drives, the dildo remained firmly in place without any frustrating slippage. The rings on the back meant that my partner & I were able to play around with binding the harness-wearer – perfect for those who want to do a bit of topping from the bottom! The verdict? A great harness that looks as good as it feels.

Scandalous Board Game

If years of playing Monopoly with your grandmother on Boxing Day has convinced you that board games are boring, Scandalous will definitely change your mind. You won't want to involve granny this time though, because it's one saucy experience. . . My partner and I invited a few open-minded friends over to try it out, and we almost wore out the dice. By the end of the evening, I'd had ice cream nibbled off my nipples, champagne licked from just about everywhere, and generally enjoyed one of the best nights I've had in a long time.

Njoy Pure Wand

This toy just oozes style – and it made my lady ooze quite a lot when we tried it out, too! My partner absolutely fell in love with its beautiful design the moment it arrived, and couldn't wait for me to try it on her. Once I'd used its talents to tease her G-spot, I moved behind her and transferred its talents to her P-spot. The fact that its stainless steel body could be warmed up or cooled down did not go unnoticed, and made for oodles of extra fun. The ball-shaped ends were also a real hit.

My girlfriend and I are both seasoned players when it comes to BDSM, but we had a friend round one night who'd never tried it. We thought it was the perfect opportunity to ease her in gently with the Spank Ties I'd just been sent... Spank Ties are made of medical grade PU foam with a carbon steel alloy core, and they twist round wrists or ankles, restraining but not binding absolutely. If your 'victim' panics, she can untie herself without your intervention. Spank Ties (as the name suggests) also handily double as whips, which deliver just the right amount of smarting without scaring off any newbies to the pain game.

POSITION of the MONTH

FEBRUARY: TONGUE-TIED

How to do it

Daria sneaks up and ambushes Brooke while she's watching Big Brother. She slowly wrenches the remote from her grasp, and then ties her up with silken scarves – sorry, manky tea towels. Daria then sits on Brooke and teases her a bit, before taking her pleasure astride Brooke's tongue.

Pleasure rating 4/5

Brooke enjoyed the thrill of not being able to see what Daria was going to do next, and not being physically able to stop her. Daria enjoyed being able to silence Brooke's nagging for a while, and get herself a good lickin' in the process.

BROOKE

Brooke says:

"I definitely enjoyed dominating Brooke for a change. If only I could manage it outside the bedroom as well..."

Difficulty rating 1/5

Tying someone up properly can be a bit tricky – you need to make sure you know your knots. Oh, and make sure you have their consent, or you could have a lawsuit on your hands.

Daria says:

"It was worth missing out on the next eviction – which is praise indeed, coming from a couch potato like me."

One Night Bland...

Dear Sindy,
All my friends have had one night stands, whereas I have just had three long-term relationships. Now that I am single, I am being pressured by my friends to cop off at clubs and go home with someone. So, the other day, I did. I managed to have an orgasm and so did she but we didn't really fancy each other and she didn't ring me. I felt a bit empty and I'm wondering if it will get better if I repeat the experience, or if I am just not the promiscuous type? My friends are all laughing at me, saying I should relax and do it every week.
Denni, Brighton

Well, Denni, what a bunch of controlling, judgmental slappers your friends are! You don't say how old you are but I'm guessing you're quite young. Never be pressured into anything... ever. Eventually, by trial and error, you will find what suits you. Life is quite a lottery really and sometimes casual sex fits in really well, whereas other times you'll rather do without. Whilst it's good not to have hang-ups about sex, you do need to follow the beat of your own drum in this most personal of choices. Tell your mates you'll jump when you're ready, they don't need to push.

Taboo

WITH SINDY SIN

Passage to Pleasure...

Dear Sindy,
Can a woman have an orgasm in her bum?
My girlfriend says she heard it was possible.
Chris, Reading

Anal stimulation can cause you to orgasm, but the contractions of the anus are just triggering the sensitive tissue on the other side of the vagina and clitoral area, causing a normal orgasm. Anal fingering and dildos can cause you to have g-spot squish from your vagina or through your urethra. This is from the g-spot in the vagina, which is a female prostate gland. You may be getting anal orgasm confused with the male prostate which is in a man's anus and can be stimulated and milked giving him a p-spot orgasm inside the anus. So the answer is "No". If you find a girl who can, though, send her to me!

Out of Lip-sync...

Dear Sindy,
My partner and I are having continuous rows over our differing libidos. My girlfriend is always up for it in the morning before we go to work, trying to snog me awake, whereas I don't feel sexy at all at that time. Then, after dinner, she usually falls asleep on the sofa before we go to bed, which is when I want it. We've tried talking it through but nothing changes.
Stella, London

Unless you both seriously make an effort to have sex when you don't particularly feel like it, then you have reached a stalemate. Maybe drink or diet is the problem. For a start, don't let her have any alcohol or carbohydrate with the evening meal – no bread, rice, pasta, etc. Not only will it keep her weight down but it will also stop her brain producing tryptophan, which is a sleep inducer. Similarly, if you are sluggish in the morning, make sure you are not drinking too much the night before. People vary in response to booze... some liven up, others conk out. Set your alarm early a few days a week, get up for the loo, clean your teeth and come back to bed with a smile and a vibrator. That should sort it.
