Not satisfied with being one of the most internationally renowned lesbian bar brands – the Candy team have set their sights on producing erotica. g3 went behind the scenes to meet the girls who are plotting to turn you on...

Under the Candy Stars banner, their objective is to create porn for lesbians by lesbians, in a secure, sleaze-free and misogyny-free environment. Before the crew got their cameras rolling, they carried out a nationwide survey to find out what turns us on.

Their first offering is the aptly named Coming Together, introducing Ruby Fox who arrives in the city, wide-eyed and innocent, and wanders into the hedonistic and exciting world of lesbian London.

DIRECTORS

Documentary directors, The Smithee Sisters jointly directed their first erotic feature.

Why the move to porn?

Why not? It's the film we've been waiting to watch – a film with realistic lesbian sex in it – women making out like lesbians, not like porn stars. We were also adamant that there should be no sex with vegetables. We're vegetarians – we eat vegetables – we don't date them!

How did you choose the actors?

We had loads of applications but managed to whittle them down to a shortlist. The calibre of the actors was so high we couldn't say no to any on the shortlist – so we created parts for them all. We were particularly delighted by how the women echoed our own reasons for wanting to make a porn film – to create realistic images of lesbians and lesbian desire, without demeaning or belittling the women involved.

Was it hard to give direction?

None of the cast had really acted before and we had only one weekend to shoot the whole film, so we just went for it, trusting their raw talent and the realism they would bring to the film. That absolutely paid off in the sex scenes, where the desire feels authentic even down to the heavy breathing.

Did you feel embarrassed?

Not really, we could have been filming someone eating a sarnie – it's funny how quickly the whole crew got used to seeing two women going at it with a strap-on. We had to keep stopping and starting for technical reasons, and in that down-time you'll all be laughing or chatting about something quite different rather than talking dirty.

SO YOU THINK YOU CAN... MAKE A PORN FILM?

WRITERS:

RV Red was the inspiration behind Coming Together, she explains that there's more to come.

What did you think about when you were writing?

Some of Ruby Fox's adventures are inspired by my own experience of coming out onto the London scene in the early 90s when I was 18, naive, but cocky and looking for fun in the deep end of the (lesbian) pool! I wanted to throw some humour into the script. It's not a serious, highbrow film, but instead about being hot for someone, discovering what turns you on... and, of course, having sex!

Is there a message in the film?

There's two: The first is that watching porn can be fun, entertaining, titillating and essentially liberating! And the second is to always be open to new experience – so go for it!

Are there going to be more adventures for Ruby Fox?

There's loads more adventures for intrepid Ruby. We're going to explore what happens after Ruby Fox's virgin voyage to the big city and in the lives of the lesbian 'muffia' she meets! I'm really looking forward to getting feedback on the first film and developing future storylines with existing and new characters.

ACTRESS

Raynbo, who plays Dominique

Why did you want to do the porn film and how did it happen?

Most of the 'lesbian' porn that I've watched reinforces the idea that lesbians exist simply to arouse men. I liked the idea of being involved with a project aimed at making female-friendly porn and reclaiming lesbianism for women. I was buying porn and got into a discussion with the sales assistant about the lack of lesbian porn that is actually aimed at lesbians! He told me about Candy Stars and I emailed my photos.

Describe your character in the film

She's a hot bitch! An arrogant, sexy DJ who likes to get her own way and usually does...

Did you enjoy playing her?

Indeed I did! She's a powerful character and her scenes were great fun to do.

How is she different to you?

I am completely clueless when it comes to DJing and Absinthe isn't really my drink of choice!

Any embarrassing moments?

I got champagne up my nose! I was meant to drink it out of the bottle but it fizzed up and went everywhere!

What was the most graphic scene you had to do?

There's a bondage scene between Dominique and another girl where Dominique's controlling attitude comes through. That was a very sexy one to do.

What did you enjoy most about making the film?

Working with some really fun, lovely people and eating copious amounts of Krispy Kreme doughnuts.

How do you feel about people recognising you after the release?

Fabulous. If you see me out and about, come and chat.

PRODUCERS

Kim Lucas and Buzzy Moitre produced Coming Together when they realised there wasn't much erotica for lesbians to buy.

Why did you want to make a lesbian porn film?

There is very little authentic, satisfying lesbian porn out there. Our survey of over 5000 women, found that 82 percent agreed that there needs to be more porn films which address female needs and are more sensitive to what really turns women on. Lesbians deserve more choice!

How does this porn film differ from mainstream lesbian porn?

These are not straight girls with plastic boobs, false nails and peroxide wigs pretending to get it on to satisfy the male stereotypical fantasy. The term 'Lesbian Porn' has been hijacked and used by the straight porn industry to imply girl-on-girl action, this film is scripted by lesbians, shot by an all-woman crew and starring real lesbians.

Is there a market for lesbian porn?

Yes, our nationwide survey indicates that there is a huge demand. A whopping 70 per cent said they would buy more porn if the scenes reflected lesbian fantasy.

Is porn important in the expression of sexuality?

Attitudes are changing and the emancipation of lesbians over the last few years has resulted in more girls coming out and being expressive about their needs, wants and desires!

9 Ways to Win Back Your Ex

You've chopped your CD collection (and the cat) in half. She's moved to Outer Mongolia. You've got no chance. She'll never take you back... Or will she?

If you're just not getting over the girl, then here are some of our suggestions for bringing your ex back into your life. Follow our advice and you could end up snuggled up on the sofa with her again by the time the next series of The L-Word starts, Bette and Tina style, that is, if you don't get sectioned first.

1 Beat the new girlfriend at her own game

For example, if your ex has dumped you because she met someone with bigger tits, get your credit card out and go get some nice double Fs, girl. While you're at it, invest in some liposuction to get rid of that horrible beer gut you've developed from sitting alone in the dark drinking Stella and crying.

2 Make her jealous

Start a rumour that you're having a torrid affair with Catherine Zeta-Jones. I mean, if she was stupid enough to dump someone with a personality as interesting as yours, she'll believe it, right? If you can manage to intercept the paperboy and doctor her copy of The Sun with some cunningly Photoshopped pics, all the better.

3 Turn stalking into a positive pastime

If she really isn't responding to the roses, chocolates and boiled rabbits – and she's smaller than you – you could try kidnapping her. The ropes and gags will definitely get her juices flowing – maybe. g3 Magazine accepts no responsibility for any custodial sentences earned after you act on our advice.

4 Let her know what she's missing

Forget about pretending you're going to kill yourself, pretend to be dead instead! She'll turn up at your funeral filled with remorse at the way she treated you, and be reduced to tears by your mates' heart-wrenching accounts of the time you went to the pub and drank too much and threw up on the bar! Just as the coffin is about to be lowered into the grave, you can leap out of it and into her arms. Of course, she may be a little perturbed by the fact that her dead ex-girlfriend's corpse has just embraced her, and the whole thing might completely backfire. We don't know. Try it and see.

5 Brainwash friends and family to your advantage

Make friends with her mother. Accompany her to bingo, compliment her blue rinse, ply her with gin and tell her your sad tale. She'll be on the phone extolling your virtues to her daughter in no time, and demanding that she take you back as you "seem such a nice girl..."

6 Laden her with expensive gifts

Buy/steal a Mercedes for her. We're all essentially materialistic and shallow and we'd love anyone who gave us a big shiny car. Even someone really desperate, who we'd just dumped for being a complete psycho. You know it's true.

7 Try alternative therapy

So – the moon's in Cancer, the wind's blowing in the right direction, and we swear you even look a bit like Willow in certain lights (usually when the lights in question are turned off); It's time to get the Voodoo dollies out and cast some spells. Also, hypnosis works wonders on stubborn ladies who've become immune to your charms. Neuro Linguistic Programming Techniques For Use on Errant Exes could well be the best £99.99 you ever spend.

8 Try the 'best mates' fact

"Let's just be friends" was the last thing you heard from her. However, this could be to your advantage. Take her literally; do girls nights in, turn up unannounced for a gossip and pretend you've got kicked out of your flat and need a roof over your head... after all, you're mates. All this matey-ness will only buy you more time with her to wow her back into your bed and oust any love rival.

9 Get on your guitar and write a tune in A-Minor

Write an album of pathetic songs about your break-up and get a recording deal. Girls in bands are hot – even the ugly ones. Fact.

A PASSION FOR PLEASURE

Words by
Sindy Sin

We all need a bit of Passion in our lives, which is why I'll be dusting off my thigh-highs and heading off to Earl's Court on the 24 and, in all probability, the 25 May. Visit www.passion-uk.com for more information, including ticket sales and a list of exhibitors.

You might think that, here at g3 HQ, all we do all day is sit around talking about sex. But you'd be wrong. Sometimes we go out to talk about it too...

A couple of weeks ago, I did exactly that when I was invited to attend the launch party for Passion, billed by the organisers as "an exciting new show for adventurous adults to explore, share and indulge their passions for everything erotic".

Well, life's not always a bed of roses and sometimes you just have to get on with it, so I donned my gladrags, slapped on the lippy and rode the Oyster to Chancery Lane underground. Here, I bumped into fellow invitee Trixie Wild, author of some intensely cathartic erotica and considered, in certain circles, to be something of a rare beauty. Good, I had found myself a playmate for the afternoon.

Not that I needed one. From beginning to end (and, in keeping with the time-honoured g3 tradition, I was one of the first to arrive and the last to leave) it was quite clear that the organisers had pulled out all the stops to ensure that my fellow guests and I would find the afternoon not just enjoyable and informative, but also mildly arousing.

Bar Volupté, a chi-chi neo-burlesque bar in the City, was an inspired choice for the festivities, as were the costumes selected for the waitresses – the perfect backdrop for finding out more about the main event. I thought I'd better do some work so, pausing only to grab a cocktail, I decided to find out more.

Passion hits Earl's Court on the 24 and 25 May and promises "to challenge the ideas of adult shows, presenting a sensual mix of art and entertainment, as well as the latest toys, clothes and accessories, in a friendly fabulous environment". Of course, this could all be marketing speak, but I doubt it. I spoke to several members of the Passion team before I got drunk and they really do have, yes, a passion for what they've conceived. Interestingly, and remembering that this is a pan-sexual rather than a gay event, most of the team are women. This is extremely good news for those of us who a) believe that women are better than men at everything that matters or b) think that the sex industry has for too long been dominated by straight men. It's not that straight men don't do a good job for their market (i.e. other straight men) but it's good to see a little bit of balance out there, eh sisters?

As you'd expect, retail treats abound, with designer fetish wear, an eye-popping range of toys and some quite gorgeous art all on hand to boost your overdraft. I could easily have spent a fortune myself – some exhibitors were showcasing their wares at the preview – so be prepared to be tempted. But, even if you're on a limited budget, Passion is about more than just driving a wedge between you and your money. Spectacular fashion shows, a burlesque theatre and a DVD Village are all promised, while for those who want to make a weekend of it, a Grand Ball and fetish party are currently in the pipeline.

POSITION of the MONTH

April: ARE YOU SITTING COMFORTABLY?

How to do it

Brooke sits on the chair patiently, whilst Daria has the difficult dilemma of whether to straddle Brooke whilst facing her, or sit on her lap and take it from behind. After half an hour and some tea and nibbles, Daria jumps on and within 30 seconds it's all over... phew!

Pleasure rating 3/5

Pure pleasure for one party... but numb legs for the other! This position is not ideal for those with bad circulation or surgical stockings – so no humping your best mate's granny, not in this position anyway.

Difficulty Rating 2/5

The hardest bit is finding the right chair, especially if you both have a lard arse. A sturdy, washable seat with no arms is ideal. If your chair is nearer to the ground, then the person on top gets added control by using the floor as a springboard or, alternatively, if it all goes pear-shaped, she can leap off in a hurry!

Brooke says:

"After a busy day at work all I wanted to do was to sit down and have a breather, next thing I know some naked bird starts bouncing her baboon bum on my lap."

BROOKE

DARIA

Daria says:

"She usually just lays there with her legs wide open waiting for me to give her one; this way I have a bit of 'me' time."

WHAT A BUMMER!

Dear Sindy,

I have always been uptight about sex and I can't orgasm unless I am alone... not because I'm shy, but because of the way I feel about my bottom, my bodily functions and the possibility of breaking wind in the middle of sex. My mother was very strict and all toilet duties were considered dirty in our house. Farting was never allowed publicly. It seems silly, but I can't even discuss this with my girlfriend, I just feel covered in shame. How can I learn to relax?

Anon, London

Yes, whoever designed the human body was obviously having a laugh by placing the pleasure centre right next to the rubbish chute. Sex can be full of smells, squelches and moments of extreme vulnerability for all of us. In fact, the best sex should be like that... unguarded... a complete romp in the swamp. Remember, not all farts are gas, some are just trapped air, and sometimes you get trapped air in the vagina that pops out sounding like Donald Duck. Anal shame is a deep-seated phobia: seeing a therapist can help. You must learn to accept your humanity and understand that unclenching your sphincter muscle is the only way to fully relax and enjoy sex. A couple of alcoholic drinks may help you, (not beer... the bubbles cause gas).

A 'windy' person can lessen wind easily. Keep a diary of the foods you have eaten. Apart from the obvious beans, you may find something as innocuous as orange juice is causing wind by acidifying the stomach. Before a sex session, refrain from these foods. Then, buy yourself some charcoal tablets from the pharmacy. They stop flatulence and settle the stomach. More drastically, you could buy an enema syringe, available online and from chemists. Give yourself an enema with warm water to wash out your bottom before making love. That way you know you are clean. Lastly, put a little perfumed oil around your anus. You should tell your partner, as she may dislike the taste if she goes down on you. In fact, let it be part of your foreplay that she oils you there gently. This will gradually decrease your fear and stop you feeling that bowel movements are dirty. Remember, even the Queen shits... and hers doesn't smell like lavender.

Taboo

WITH SINDY SIN

COME LIE WITH ME

Dear Sindy,

Can you tell me if it's normal to make love sometimes and not want an orgasm? My partner says I have a low sex drive and I need to sort it. But it's just that sometimes I am satisfied without the need to come.

Jayne, London

It could be that your girlfriend is more concerned with her ego at having given you an orgasm and feels insecure about her prowess when you don't come. You need to reassure her that you feel great... whilst checking that there isn't any health reason why you don't have an orgasm sometimes. Stress, diet, drugs, alcohol and inhibitions can all be a cause of dysfunction. But, if you are truly content with fewer orgasms than her, she must accept that. To pressure you is to add needless angst.

POINTED QUESTION

Dear Sindy,

I have a girlfriend who has really long stick-on nails. They really feel weird when she masturbates me or tries to touch me inside. Now, she is refusing to take them off, saying: 'That's my diva look!' What can I do?

Sophie, Brighton

Simple. Go to the nail bar and get some yourself then make love to her vigorously and see how she likes it. If she does like it, you then have two choices: Continue scratching each other to death or leave her. It's unhygienic and frankly, selfish of her to expect you to put up with something affecting your intimacy simply on a fashion whim.
